NOT GUILTY

Chances Are Against Entering Into Trial Monday at Sandyhook.

Lexington, Ky., May 23.—Judge James Hargis was declared not guilty by the jury this morning after the body had deliberated on the case one hour. The jury was taken to the courthouse shortly after 7 o'clock, and before 8 o'clock they announced that a verdict had been reached, and asked the Sheriff to summon Judge Parker.

It was an hour before Judge Parker arrived at the courthouse, and when the jury was brought into the room was filled with friends of the Hargises, who had been summoned by 'phone from every section of the city.

Shortly after the jury announced that a verdict had been agreed upon the telephones on every floor began to work, and city and county officials and their friends flocked to the building, and, while the officers in charge of the jury claimed not to know the result, all the friends of Hargis wore a satisfied expression as they entered the court room and walked over to the defendant and his family and extended their hands in congratulation, and when the verdict was read by Deputy Clerk Wade every man in the court room and corridor of the building friendly to the Hargis clan began cheering and kept it up for five minutes, with no apparent effort on the part of the Deputy Sheriffs to quell the disorder.

Hargis jumped to his feet and rushed to the front of the bar and shook each juror by the hand and thanked him for the verdict, and one of the most remarkable trials in the history of the State was at an end.

Attorney A. F. Byrd, who has been active in the prosecution of the Hargises and others since the first trial of Curt Jett and Tom White at Jackson four years ago, said he was not in the least discouraged over the result of the trial. He said that while he had not looked for a death sentence, he had not thought it possible that twelve men could be found who would acquit in face of the strong evidence produced by the Commonwealth.

Attorneys Byrd and Jouett will likely proceed to Sandy Hook, Elliott county, Saturday, where the trial of Hargis for the alleged murder of Dr. J. B. Cox will be called on Monday.

It is believed now that the cases of Alexander and Elbert Hargis and Ed Callahan, also charged with complicity in plots to kill Cockrill, will be filed away in the court here. The evidence is practically the same against the other three men, as well as Bill Britton, who is awaiting a third trial for this killing. Britton gave bond this morning for his appearance at the next term of court in the sum of $7,500. His bond was signed by Judge James and Alexander Hargis.

Britton was not allowed to leave the county jail, being at once rearrested for the assassination of Dr. Cox.

Britton has been twice tried for the Cockrill murder. He was sentenced to life imprisonment once, and the jury disagreed here three weeks ago. Britton has been in jail here for nearly three years.

The Hargis case has been on trial here for over two weeks. More than fifty witnesses were examined. This is the second acquittal of Hargis, he having been declared not guilty of the murder of James B. Marcum at his trial at Beattyville last July.

The Hargises and their friends took the Leland Hotel by storm following the acquittal of Jim Hargis and the proverbial saying that wine flowed like water certainly held good during the reign of jollification. Breathitt county was strongly represented in the crowd, among those present from Jackson being Breck Combs, James Brophy and several old-time friends of Hargis and Callahan. While this jollification was being indulged in by Jim Hargis and his friends at the Leland Hotel, Alex. Hargis repaired to a wine room at the Phoenix Hotel with several friends and made merry. However, the breach between the brothers remains.

After the verdict had been returned and the jurors received their pay from the trustee of the jury fund several members went immediately to the jail, where they held a talk with Bill Britton and congratulated him on his partial victory in his last trial and wished him success in his other trials for both the Cockrill and Cox killings. From the jail the jurors went immediately to the Leland Hotel, where they partook of the hospitality of Jim Hargis, which was being spread with a lavish hand. It was reported that on the first ballot several of the jurors voted to convict Hargis, but were not willing to impose either the death sentence or a life term in the penitentiary, and, as the instructions of the court said plainly it was either one of these sentences or freedom, they readily consented to join with the majority and vote to acquit, and this verdict was reached on the second ballot. It was also rumored that the verdict was reached last night at the hotel because of the illness of two of the jurors, Rhody Herndon and C. R. Murphy, in order that Hargis could be free in case anything serious should result from the sudden illness of the jurors.

With the practical closing of the Hargis trial here, much interest is now felt in the trial of the same defendant for alleged complicity in the murder of Dr. B. D. Cox, which has been set for next Monday at Sandyhook. Attorney Byrd said to-night that there is very little likelihood of the case being put on trial next Monday, or at this term of the Sandyhook court. Mr. Byrd said it is very unlikely that the court at Sandyhook will take up the case until the appeal questioning the transfer of the case to Sandyhook has been acted on by the Court of appeals. Even if the higher court should bring in a decision before Monday, no witnesses have been summoned, and therefore when the case is called next Monday it is almost certain to be continued till the next term of court, which probably will be next fall. Mr. Byrd also said that no matter what the decision in the Hargis case now in the hands of the jury here is, the case against Alex. and Elbert Hargis and Ed Callahan, also charged with the murder of James Cockrill, will not be tried here now, as the Fayette court can give no more time to these cases before next fall.

Letter From Arkansas.

Devall's Bluff, Ark., May 21, 1907. Mr. S. M. Jenkins Editor. DEAR SIR:—Will tell you a little of my travels of late in Missouri and Arkansas. I landed at Belmont, Mo. Here is a little town on stilts with about six stores, railroad hotel and a few houses. While here it was raining and the lowlands were covered in water. Went to Charleston, a nice town of about 3000 inhabitants, and down the Iron Mt., stopped at Bertrand and Sikeston. In this section they were plowing wheat under, it being no good on account of army worms and so much rain. I went on to Dexter and still it rained. Then I came on to Malden, Mo., and then to Campbell, thence to Piggott, Ark. Next was Paragould. Paragould has about 7000 inhabitants, has the largest slack-barrel stave factories in the world.

Next I came to Jonesboro, the town of Northeast Arkansas, it has about 12000 inhabitants. Here I found Will Klapp. He is a Crittenden county boy doing $50,000 business yearly. He does considerable jobbing business.

Next I came to Harrisburg on the Iron Mt. and then to Wynne, a railroad junction of the Iron Mt. and Frisco. Wynne is directly West of Memphis about sixty-five miles. Then West to Forrest City, a railroad junction of the Iron Mt. and Rock Island, a good town of 3000 inhabitants. Then West to Marianna and then to Helena, Ark. Here is a big town of 15,000 inhabitants. Here I looked across the river at the state of Mississippi, being the sixteenth state I've seen, seventy miles below Memphis. Then I came back to Wynne and to Brinkley, a lumber town of about 1200 inhabitants, when between here and Devall's Bluff I saw my first prairie grass, hundreds of acres of it. Devall's Bluff is an old noted place. During the war the Union army had a post here. This town has a pearl cotton factory situated as it is on the White river, the home of pearls. The streets are covered with wagon-loads of the hulls after being reamed for buttons. It is a peculiar sight to see. Here is the largest boat-oar factory in the world. Also persimmon factories making shuttles for silk mills of persimmons and dogwood. About 2000 people here. Hope soon to be where 'the sun shines bright in my old Kentucky home.' Best wishes for you,

D. W. STONE.
